COLLEGE AUDITORIUM

Adieu, forests. (Farewell, Forests)—

TSCHAIKOWSKY

From "Jeanne d'Arc"

So will the Lord!

I must obey Him, obey the call of her the Holy Virgin!

But whence this fear I feel within my heart?

Why fails my soul, and wherefore does she tremble?

Farewell ye mountains, ye beloved meadows!

Ye smiling valleys, fare ye well for aye!

No longer now among ye may I wander,

To all to-day I bid a long farewell! Farewell

Ye meadows all, ye shadow-haunted forests,

Ah, when I am gone you still so fair will be!

Ah, fare ye well, ye caves and cooling fountains!

For Joan departs, and nevermore shall see ye.

To all the joys we have known together,

I bid farewell to-day for evermore;

And ye my lambs, disperse o'er yonder heather:

No shepherd have ye now to go before!

For I forsake this flock to tend another

On far off gory fields, the fields of war!

The Lord's command Himself on me imposeth,

No vain desire my willing heart encloseth:

Madonna! Thou knowest all my aspiration!

Thou seest my trembling, all my sorrow.

For evermore farewell, ye mountains all, and meadows,

Ye smiling valleys, fare ye well for aye!

For I depart and never, nevermore shall see ye!
