D. AND FINALLY -

I want to commend to your thinking and guidance this splendid statement:

"It seems evident that if teacher training institutions are to prepare teachers to render the most valuable service to society, they must work out for themselves a philosophy of education in accordance with the needs of the present and the trends that seem best for the future, select students who have the capacity and willingness to respond to adequate education and training, make up their faculties of persons who themselves have the qualifications which should be developed in their students, and provide the curriculum and equipment which will assure opportunities for students and faculty members to grow through cooperative participation in educative activities."

- G. Lamar Harrison - Ph. D.
(Doctor's Dissertation)

Faithfully yours,
