YOUR WEEK

Comes Spring

Spring, new-born of the Seasons, comes to Prairie View in such a subtle manner. There are, of course, the usual manifestations of its arrival in the lengthened day, heightened activity by Mr Clark, the gardener, around the fountain, and the new intense greenness of our prolific clover. On all our trees, however, which during the winter months have lifted their bare reed-like limbs Godward forming silhouettes of tracery 'gainst wintry skies, there appear buds. Though observable one must look closely to see them for their appearance heralds Spring without pageantry, without bunting. There is about them, however, evidence of the inexorableness of Nature, and one senses an unswerveable will to be born - and so they are. Thus winter runs its course, and all Nature submits to the glorious new Season.

And, who knows, perhaps from deep within the collective human being will come the buds of love for fellow-men and there will then be peace - comes Spring - in our time.
