Mid-term examinations will be held March 23, 24, 25, 1950. Teachers who have classes that meet only once a week, and not within the scheduled period for mid-term examinations, will give the examinations for that class on the day the class meets during examination week. Also, teachers are advised that grades are due in the office of the registrar before five o'clock Wednesday afternoon, March 29.

YOUR WEEK

About a Man of Faith

Fisk University is fortunate to have on its staff Dean W. J. Faulkner. His visit to our canpus last week was a source of genuine inspiration for men and women who dare to believe in the excellence of the human spirit, and who share with Lecomte du Nouy faith in the existence of a lofty area which is the eventual goal of human effort. Giving generously of his time, Dean Faulkner met with a group of collegians in the Student Lounge Sunday afternoon. Speaking with conviction he declared that each element of the microscopic world had a destination, a reason for existence. And using his life as a prime example he indicated how human beings, elements of the macroscopic universe, had destinations and similar reasons for existence. With humility and deep reverence; qualities of men of true faith, the good man told how four persons, two of whom he had never seen, had been significant factors in his development into a real person.

An indication of the impressiveness of Dean Faulkner's message was a recounting of it on a nearby rad o station for the commentator's early morning listeners. The commentator had, of course, been in the Student Lounge Sunday afternoon. Indeed, it would seem that words of faith are like the concentric waves formed by a stone dropped in mid-ocean which, though often unseen, gently, yet inexorably, form the shores we call home. And like those waves so did the words from this man of faith help mold that which was the best in those of us who heard him. Because four persons earth-bound bearers of the lamp of truth had lived so that their lives became significant for him, he carried the torch a little further. This, then, is the purpose for which men must live: that those who come after them shall not grope in darkness, but travel onward, upward in the inextinguishable light of goodness and faith.
