YOUR WEEK

"I Stand In Awe--"

Mrs. Ada Randall is one of the most charming ladies you would care to meet. She lives in Detroit, Michigan, and recently came to Texas for the first time to visit her son, an instructor in sociology on our campus. Her life has been long, full, and purposeful. To hear her reminisce about visits to New York and the New England states about the turn of the century is rather a liberal education. Like most conscious visitors she was enamoured with the vastness of the sky as seen from Prairie View.

On one particular evening, during her visit, a roiling mass of cumulus clouds had been thrust high into the sky toward the zenith. And Mrs. Randall said, quite simply, "I stand in awe before the majestic beauty of those towering thunderheads." A rather wonderful statement from a lady of 74 summers. For to be able to retain through life a keen appreciation for the excellence of natural beauty is an approach toward perfectness of spirit seldom made by man.

And what fills us with awe? The mushrooming, filthy clouds of death that mark explosions of our atomic bombs? The hurtling, man-belittling, supersonic jet airplane? The ear-splitting dissonance that is our be-bop music. Or is it the fear that someone will at sometime impoverish us by taking away our physical wealth?

What is the quality of that which fills you with awe?
