YOUR WEEK

THANKSGIVING 1948

Thanks, God. We're glad we're like we are. We like being human, which does not mean that if we were more animal we'd be any less thankful, but we like the give and take of this human existence. There often seems to be a slight favoring, naturally enough, of the other fellow, but when we're at our best we know that there is a universal justice in operation - a justice of the spheres; a perfect justice for imperfect men. We're thankful for the privilege of possessing minds that can conceive of the idea of God, and subsequently, the greatness and smallness of ourselves. The longer we live the more human we become, therefore, for what we are and what our becoming can be - thanks.
