From the Library

"If there is validity to the claim that knowledge is power, then the diffusion of knowledge through libraries is socially essential . . . The library no longer interests only the booklover; it must meet the everyday informational, recreational, and cultural needs of a larger proportion of the individuals and groups in its community."

This week more than 12,000 public librarians, 5,000 college and university librarians, 9,000 school librarians, and 3,000 special librarians with the clientele they serve, and the agencies and groups they represent will be observing BOOK WEEK in its total pattern throughout America. The slogan this year is "Books Tell The Story." We invite and urge everyone in this college community to join with his library in this celebration.

NATIONAL BOOK WEEK NOV. 14-20, 1948.
