YOUR WEEK

While Watching Two Children At Play

The little brown boy is almost seven
His playmate a girl is past five
For them life is fine on the grey good earth
There is joy in being alive

For quick bright fish are yet to be caught
In gurgling cool fish streams
Or the boy might muse 'bout engines or things
While the girl has girlish girl dreams

Their days are full of laughter and tears
Their moods come and go like the wind
Tempering their minds their childish fears
The process of growth without end

And all today's children of seven and five
Like corns in deep dark sod
Shall grow and live more sturdy than we
Through the handiwork - not of man - of God
