Y O U R W E E K (()) The Underlying Principle of the Observation
Of National Scholarship Week (April 25-May 1)
..... by Artye Lavelle Washington

To do scholarly work means possessing the ability and intuition to learn. This learning is continuous; a life-long process of mental and physical development. Whether an individual desires to make this learning scholarly and of the most worth, is his own choice. However, it is hoped that his choice will be in the affirmative.

Why make such an assertion? In the first place, there is always an appeal for scholarly endeavor and intellectual advancement. One should build on his foundation of knowledge so that one bit of learning integrates with another, thus forming a wall of useful service to humanity. Secondly, with so many changes going on about us, an individual must possess the ability to satisfactorily and intelligently adjust himself to these changes. Thirdly, in this crucial period, the need for men of vision is great. Without an awareness of this need, such an awareness or revelation can never be realized. In the fourth place, there exists a need for men of responsibility. No one can deny the need of scholarship and ambition to undertake such a daring feat. Therefore, let respect and admiration for scholarship be breathed by everyone; let it be stressed in schools, seminaries, and in colleges; and let it be written in books, magazines, and newspapers. Let us strive to build stately, noble, and vast mansions of intelligence for the welfare of our race as well as for the upbuilding of our rich heritage of American civilization. All in all, let Scholarship reign paramount in our esteem on our own college campus.

Those who take honors in scholarly endeavors, who learn the laws which govern men and things, and obey them, are the really great and successful men in the world.
