YOUR WEEK

Of Dogs and Men

The opinion may not be entirely valid, but men have a pretty good way to go - they have dogs, and (of much smaller moment) women to love them. Dogs, small and white, big and brown, with distinctive lineage or of the Heinz line, have great faith in their masters, and give to them love and a devotion without parallel. They ask but a kind word, a pat on the head, and be the man without so-called human success, he is loved. (Women, being of small moment, love men, too, but often not as well. Bless 'em.) "Useless" is a boy's dog. We had always admired him for his boundless doggishness, but when one of his forelegs was injured our admiration knew no bounds. With only three good legs he continued and continues to be a very doggish boy's dog. Always ready for a romp or to hop along behind young Master Fry's bike his long tail becoming a study of poetry in motion. Here's to dogs, then, long may they love men in the approved "Useless" manner. As bad as men are purported to be, as long as they can inspire the love of dogs (and beautiful women) there must be some good in them, too. Quien sabe?
